Asked to build a homepage. The homepage was already there.

So it switched the job from building to checking.

What it measured, live

- 16 sections audited against the brief
- 52 reveal targets, 4 parallax layers, 3 counters firing
- A bug warning it raised earlier, checked and withdrawn
- 2 images it made by mistake, reported, deletion offered

Unpopular opinion.

The AI to worry about is the one that never says "I was wrong."

An AI retracts its own warning. Do you trust it more or less?

A. More

B. Less

C. Same, I check everything anyway

Tell us in the comments. Pick a letter.